

Former Loving/The City Star, Ted King, Signs on at GH

Written by Linda Marshall-Smith
Sunday, 30 June 2002 16:00

New villain named Alcazar to take General Hospital by storm

Stop The Presses!

Soapdom has learned a little about Ted King (formerly known as T.W. King) who will join the cast of General Hospital in the role of Alcazar in late July, 2002.

Alcazar first appears on the canvass with a vendetta against Port Charles crime Lord, Sonny Corinthos. However, it quickly becomes evident that his agenda runs far deeper than a grudge against Sonny. In fact, it will have consequences that ripple throughout the town.

King is known to ABC viewers for his portrayal of Danny Roberts on Loving, and subsequently on The City. His other television credits include being a series regular on Charmed, as well as guest-starring roles on numerous popular primetime series such as Fraiser, Sex and the City, Law and Order: SVU, and Jag.

Ted King, who is sometimes credited as Theodore William King, was raised in Bethesda, Maryland, then California and New York. He attended the Tisch School of the Arts at New York University where he studied film direction. King co-founded the Portal Theatre Company in New York City and has been a strong presence in New York Theatre for several years. King worked as a film and video editor before landing his first leading acting role.

King's first airdate as Alcazar is Monday, July 22, 2002. GH fans, you don't want to miss it. Things will definitely be heating up in Port Charles!