

James Franco returns to General Hospital, Friday, February 25

Written by Linda Marshall-Smith
Thursday, 24 February 2011 17:04

It's not enough that he guest starred on General Hospital on and off since 2009. It's not enough that he is nominated for an Academy Award. It's not enough that he's the face of Gucci fragrances, or that he's co-hosting the 83rd Academy Awards broadcast Los Angeles on Sunday, February 27.

All of that is all fine and good, but now, he's back on General Hospital as performance artist Franco on Friday, February 25th and Monday, February 28th to wreak havoc once again in Port Charles as he makes a very important phone call to his arch-nemesis Jason Morgan.

During the call, Jason (Steve Burton) is virtually speechless as Franco goes on about his latest artwork-- self-portraits -- and asks if Jason's killed anyone lately. "Oh how I miss that," says Franco. "I really do." Franco also pokes a little fun at James Franco's current ubiquitous-ness. "I know, I know," he says to Jason. "Multi-tasking."

What does the performance artist have up his sleeve this time? Could it have something to do with the explosive end to Sonny and Brenda's wedding? The Balkan? Or is he just itching to rub Jason the wrong way once again?

Tune in to General Hospital on KABC on Friday, February 25th and Monday, February 28th and find out!