

All My Children Season 1 Finale to air Monday, September 2

Written by Linda Marshall-Smith
Wednesday, 28 August 2013 15:43

Taking your online soap opera-watching experience to primetime levels, The Online Network will air the season one finale of All My Children on Monday, September 2, 2013.

Like every primetime show, there's a season debut and a season finale. Your soaps, All My Children and One Life to Live, now share this distinction.

Here's what you can expect on Monday's fairwell to season one:

All My Children Season 1 Finale

JR apologizes to Brooke for his behavior at the gala, but is he still looking for revenge?

Now that Cassandra has come home, she feels more alone than ever. Can Colby pull her out of her depression and show her all the beauty life has to?

Then, it's back to JR who makes Cara an offer that will bring them even closer, but is she haunted by his implied threat of keeping Oliver's paternity a secret?

Plus, why are Jesse and Angie in such an embrace? Are they simply showing their love, or is trouble brewing for them in Pine Valley? Could trouble's name be David?

Fear not. These and many other questions will be answered when All My Children returns. We are not quite sure when that will be as of yet, so in the meantime, you can tune in to Hulu, iTunes and TOLN.com to see all episodes from the first season on demand.

All My Children Season 1 Finale to air Monday, September 2

Written by Linda Marshall-Smith
Wednesday, 28 August 2013 15:43

Photos (c) The Online Network