

Where Are They Now ~ ATWT's Brooke Alexander

Written by Mark Edward Wilows
Sunday, 16 January 2005 16:00

P>

Alexander was chosen to host "World Beat," a music show on CNN that would be seen around the world, and the best part was that she would move back to New York.

"I mean... could there of been anything greater!" Alexander beamed. "I've done that show for three-and-a-half years. I loved it! And since I love music, it was the perfect show. I also enjoyed the experience of hosting."

Alexander loves to explore different aspects of the industry and is always curious, but said, "I will always act. That's what I really only want to do. When I'm not acting, I miss it terribly."

For now, however, Alexander has settled into a nine to five job. Working for the Fox News Channel in the promotion dept, she comes up with new ways and ideas to promote Fox news on the Internet and on the air.

"The job at Fox is interesting, but like I said, I still want to act. This is a job where I learned a lot and am grateful, Alexander added. " This job is an exploration. On election night, it was exhausting, an experience, and educational."

Alexander has also taken on a new role of being a single mom to one-year-old son, Jace. And being a new mom has put her life in perspective, saying "it turns your whole world upside down."